Hearing in Noise?

You Bet You Can! Here’s How

Copyright by Neil Bauman

Editor: You think it’s impossible to hear when there’s background noise present? Well, Neil Bauman thinks differently, and he’s here to tell you about the way that he does it. Many of us find we prefer to use the PockeTalker with our hearing aid telecoil and a neckloop. Try both ways and decide which works best for your hearing loss.

The PockeTalker Pro

The solution that I personally love is using a small amplifier with a microphone and earphones. The device I use is the PockeTalker Pro. Not only does it give excellent results, it costs just a small fraction of what fancy hearing aids cost, yet works great for me.

When my wife and I go out driving, I would normally have to take my eyes off the road and look at her in order to speechread/understand her. Not a great idea when I am the driver, especially in heavy traffic!

With the PockeTalker Pro, this is no longer a problem. Here’s what I do. Before we start, I clip my lapel microphone to the chest strap of my wife’s seatbelt, placing it as close to her mouth as possible. (I could just as easily clip it to her sweater or blouse, but the seat belt is more convenient in our car because of the kind of seat belts we have.)

I plug the microphone into the microphone jack on the top of the PockeTalker. I also plug in my binaural earphones.

SHHH Supports Bill H.R.3103 To Provide A Tax Credit for Hearing Aids

U.S. Representative Jim Ryun (R-KS) has introduced H.R.3103, the Hearing Aid Assistance Tax Credit Act, which will provide a tax credit of up to $500 per device toward the purchase of hearing aids. US Senator Coleman (R-MN) has also introduced Senate Bill 2055, which is a companion bill.

The tax credit may be taken by an individual age 55 or older purchasing a hearing aid for their own use, or by a parent purchasing a hearing aid for a dependent child or parent. The tax credit is not refundable and may be used once every five years.

The Bill has no restrictions on which type of hearing aid and professional provider the consumer may select. The credit will apply to any hearing aid that is considered a “qualified hearing aid” under the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act.

“This brings national attention to the financial impact that hearing loss has on the individual... and their family”, stated Dr. Terry Portis, executive director of SHHH. “There is virtually no help today for someone who needs to purchase hearing aids and the out of pocket expenses are getting higher and higher. This legislation is a good step forward in getting financial help to those who need hearing aids.”

H.R. 3103 and Senate Bill 2055 would provide a potential benefit to a population of around 2 million individuals, many of whom cite financial reasons as the primary barrier to treatment, and would be available only once every 5 years. Neither H.R. 3103

(earbuds actually) and adjust the volume for comfort. That is all there is to it! Now I can freely converse with my wife without any trouble.

This system is so sensitive that I only need the volume set on 1 (out of 5). This means I have more than enough reserve power if I should ever need it or if my hearing should get worse. (For the record, I have a severe hearing loss. This gives you a good idea of how powerful and sensitive this system really is.)

We do much the same thing in restaurants. My wife clips the microphone to her sweater a bit to one side so the microphone cord doesn’t hang down into her dinner. The microphone cord is 6 feet long so I can easily lay it to one side of the table-well out of the way. (Actually, it is long enough to string under the table if I choose to do that instead.) I put the earbuds into my ears and hear very well. Just like in the car, background noise becomes almost non-existent so I do not have to crank up the volume much.

Not only does the PockeTalker work great in noisy restaurants, it also works great for intimate dinners where you don’t want to be overheard. With the PockeTalker I can hear my wife without her having to shout “sweet nothings” at me (and to half the restaurant as well!) There are two secrets to using ALDs effectively. One is to use dual earphones-one in each ear. This makes a tremendous difference since we have less than perfect discrimination. With two earphones, our understanding goes way up as compared to listening with just one.

An added bonus is that the earphones also cut out some of the car/road/wind noise, but still allow me to hear some environmental sounds. I like to wear unobtrusive earbuds rather than wear headphones. This is my choice. I find them much more comfortable. The other secret to effective ALD use is to place the microphone as close as you can to the lips of the person you want to hear. This allows you to keep the volume down so the microphone won’t pick up the more distant background noise.

The PockeTalker is a flexible system. For example, if I wanted to, I could wear my hearing aids, switch them to their telecoils and plug my neckloop into the PockeTalker instead of using the earbuds and hear just as well.

Unfortunately, in my experience, I find that a lot of places where I want to use my telecoils also have a lot of electrical (technically magnetic) interference. This interference can range from slightly annoying to being so loud as to drown out the speaker! The good news is that interference does not bother the PockeTalker Pro at all. As a result, I can use it with confidence anywhere.

Another neat feature of the PockeTalker is that because it is a “hard-wired” system, no one can listen in on your conversations like they could if you were using an FM or loop system.

Cost and Availability: What does a system like this cost? The good news is that the whole system I use lists for only $206.99—a minuscule 4-7% of the $3,000.00 to $5,000.00 a pair of fancy hearing aids would cost me—and it works a whole lot better in the situations I’ve described above.

The system I use includes the PockeTalker Pro (PKT PRO1-0/$164.50). To this I add dual mono earbuds (EAR 014/$17.50) and a Tie Clip microphone (Radio Shack part no. 33-3013/$24.99). If you already have stereo earbuds/earphones that you want to use, you can do so. Instead of buying the EAR 014 earbuds, you just need to get an in-line stereo to mono converter (Radio Shack part no. 274-882/$3.99).

To learn more about the many features of the PockeTalker Pro, or to order one for yourself and begin communicating with ease, request a catalog from General Technologies (1-800-328-6684) or Hearing Resources (1-800-531-2139). You do not have to put up with not hearing when the noise builds up. With the right technology, you too, like me, can hear better!

nor Senate Bill 2055 is intended to cover the full cost of hearing aids, but will simply provide some measure of financial assistance to the groups who are most in need of these devices but are unable to afford them: those approaching or in retirement, and families with children.

SHHH believes this is a good first step in the process of getting coverage for hearing aids. A tax credit, unlike a tax deduction, is a dollar for dollar amount. More importantly it brings recognition and credibility to hearing aids and their benefits.

Dear Mr. Last Name:

I support H.R. 3103 (or Senate Bill 2055), the Hearing Aid Assistance Tax Credit Act, and ask that you co-sponsor it.

We need a special tax treatment for hearing aids because Medicare and most insurance providers do not cover them. While 95% of individuals with hearing loss could be successfully treated with hearing aids, only 22% currently use them. The average out-of-pocket expense for two hearing aids today is over $2,800 and thousands of people are unable to afford them.

I strongly support this Bill because it would bring the benefit of hearing aids to some people who can benefit from them – those over the age of 55 and dependents.

Please show leadership on this issue and co-sponsor H.R. 3103. Thank you very much.

A Trip to Russia

I have been hearing impaired since I was five years old as a result of high fevers and Rubella measles.

It was frustrating, as a mother of four children, to not be able to understand everyday conversations with my children. Because my hearing loss was so profound, I became dependent on my children to “hear” for me.

In 1996, my youngest daughter, Kari, and her husband Chanucey, went on a two-week mission trip to Russia. When they came back from their trip, Kari told me that she had something that she needed to talk to me about. She said that she wanted to apologize to me.

I was very surprised, and asked Kari to explain what she meant...

Kari said, “Well, Mom, you know that Chauncey and I could not speak the Russian language. So we had to have a Russian interpreter.” Kari continued to explain: “There were a lot times when the interpreter would be speaking to another Russian person, in their native language. I was always curious as to what they were saying to each other. So, I would ask the interpreter what the Russians were saying. The interpreter would answer, “Oh, it’s nothing important, or, I’ll tell you later…”

Kari went on to say that the interpreter did not always respond back to Kari’s inquiry. Kari said that as a result, she and Chauncey felt left out of a lot of conversations with the Russian people.

At this point, Kari started crying, and she said, “Mom, it was then, that I thought of all the times that you felt left out of conversations because you could not hear: I am sorry for those times, Mom.”

My daughter and I continued to talk about my hearing loss and how it affects my life. From that day on, my daughter made every effort to include me in everyday conversations.

Sometimes it takes a “trip to Russia” to open a hearing person’s understanding of how a hearing loss affects a person’s life.

For myself, being hearing impaired, I am forever grateful for those “understandings.” Life has a lot to teach all of us. All it takes is the willingness to understand and communicate to the best of our ability.

We are so glad for the sponsors who support the work we do by not only telling their clients about SHHH, but starting with this issue they also support us by purchasing ads in this newsletter. Many THANKS to our sponsors!

Seniors With Hearing Loss Face Discrimination
When Trying to Schedule a Cochlear Implant

Are you a Senior on Medicare who has been turned down for a cochlear implant? We want to hear from you! Because of current government regulations, which we believe are unfair and descriminatory, seniors are required to demonstrate a more severe hearing loss than everyone else in order to qualify for a cochlear implant. We are trying to change this. Please email SHHH (sportis@hearingloss.org) so we can hear your story!

Dry & Store

We received the following comment from Scott DeRieux who dispenses hearing aids in the Portland area:

“Thanks for keeping up the good work on the SHHH Hear It is! newsletter. I always find something useful to share with my clients. You mentioned the “Dry & Store” product, and suggested removing the hearing aid batteries, before using any dry aid type kit. I have obtained “Dry & Store” brand “Professional Hearing Aid Conditioning System” units for my clients who leave the batteries in with uniformly positive results. The operating instruction booklet that comes with the machine reads;

You may leave the battery in your hearing aid during conditioning, but open the battery door for maximum drying effect. In fact, an independent test by a world leader in batteries has shown that under high humidity conditions, regular use of Dry & Store can increase hearing aid battery life by 10% to 20%.”

Scott goes on to say, “Some of my clients who experience extended battery life benefit have suggested that the money saved pays for the cost of desiccant brick replacement.”

Being of Service

Survival is acting in your own self-interest, and there are times when that becomes necessary. Yet there is so much more to life beyond mere survival. True prosperity comes from going beyond your own limited interests. The more you take into account the interests of others, the more prosperous your own life becomes.

Prosperity comes not so much from having the right job or having the right contacts. Prosperity comes more from having the genuine desire to be of service.

Think of someone whom you consider to be truly and consistently successful. That person has found an effective way to be of service.

The more valuable you can make yourself to others, the more value you’ll see flowing into your own life. That holds true no matter what your circumstances may be.

Go beyond the mere survival dictated by your own narrow self-interests. Fill your moments with service, and you’ll fill your life, your world with real richness.
